I would like to take a moment to tell you a little about my breeding philosophy and how I place puppies.

We provide all of our dogs with (and wean our puppies onto) a natural, biologically, species appropriate and varied raw diet as well as providing ample exercise and fresh air. We use no chemicals and a very limited vaccination schedule only vaccinating for what is required by law (Rabies). In doing this we will continue to improve the overall health of our Bostons for generations to come. As natural rearing breeders, it is important to us that our puppies go to homes that appreciate and understand the importance of a raw diet and minimal vaccines.

As a "Show Breeder" I do not breed often and my goal when I do, is to produce "healthy" puppies that conform to the Standard as closely as possible. We breed Boston Terriers mainly for ourselves, both to love and show, we do not always have puppies available since we do not breed to sell dogs or make money. We spend far more on our dogs than we could ever hope to recover!

Often, we may only have one or two litters a year if that. However, our goal is to improve on our breed while preserving its unique characteristics. Much work is needed in several areas pertaining to health as well as conformation. The Boston Terrier, like any purebred, has several hereditary health issues such as juvenile cataracts, deafness and luxating patellas (which are also made worse by environment and inadequate nutrition).

Our goal as a steward of the Boston Terrier breed is to breed only those dogs that are known to be free of such afflictions while still maintaining the type, temperament and essentially, the true Boston Terrier. Much work goes into each breeding and even more work into each litter. It is a never-ending goal richly rewarded by that sweet puppy breath, that beautiful champion, and that happy new owner.

Although we do participate in conformation shows, ribbons and titles are not more important to us than the health of our dogs. With enough money and persistence, almost any dog can be titled. Like most breeders, we have seen champions we would not consider using in our breeding program. Our ultimate goal is to produce both typey and truly healthy dogs!

Please know that when we breed, we try to make the best match that will produce the most sound as well as pretty puppies. While not every puppy in a litter will make the grade as show quality, those that do look promising should be given the opportunity to shine. Therefore, when you see a puppy that is labeled "Show Potential" or "Available to show home", that means that I feel this puppy has qualities that will enable it to be competitive in the ring someday. While I may be willing to sell this puppy to a pet home, I would ideally like to find a home where the pup may be shown someday, if they continue to develop to their potential.

Because I do health testing on the Sires and Dams of the puppies I breed and am so particular who I do breed and to whom, the pups I do produce are like gold to me. I really don't want to throw their potential away. I understand that this can be very frustrating to the person who is simply looking for a pet puppy and then sees a picture of a puppy they feel they just "HAVE TO HAVE". I have sold several promising pups to non-show homes, and though I don't regret the sales, it is difficult knowing that those pups are 'lost' to me, and their potential will never be known. So with this in mind, please be very careful before committing to buying a show-potential puppy, not just from me, but from any breeder. Do not be unfair by promising to show the dog, and then finding one excuse after another not to. Showing can be a very rewarding endeavor, and many people who try it end up getting 'bit by the bug'. Children can learn valuable lessons about responsibility and sportsmanship by competing in Junior Showmanship, Obedience and Agility. However, having a show dog takes commitment, time, and money. It is not a hobby to be taken lightly. Many Boston Breeders are like myself, very small-scale, but dedicated. We do not have the resources to keep every promising pup ourselves, but are willing to let them go to others who want to get a good start. All that we ask in return is that the fruits of our efforts are not wasted. We will go to great lengths to help and mentor newcomers regarding natural rearing and showing. We see you as the future in the breed. And we want to make sure that the breed is in good hands. So that means that we will be a little choosy about the homes that our pups go to. I hope you understand.

Thank you!

Dr Jeannie (Jeanette) Thomason
